

I can tell that the mirror is a focus area of the image because it is on the rule of thirds.

The reflection in the mirror is what I like about this image. I also like the idea of catching a reflection in this image. I also like it because the main aspect of the image is right in the corner rather than the middle.

When I was looking through photos taken by Friedlander this area of the image caught my eye.